

Although I don't have any authority when it comes to the church, I do have a lot of experience in marriages. My first marriage was at the age of 12, to a much older woman. Overall, I have been married five times. No one has ever said that there is a limit on how many wives you can have in one lifetime. God himself said to be fruitful and multiply, which is exactly what I'm doing.

My last wife left her parents to marry me and did not care how many wives I had had in the past, so why should all these other women have a problem? Think about King Solomon and all of his wives. Why shouldn't I be able to live like him? It is a privilege! I am blessed to have married five women and I've picked the best according to their physical features. Just as the church has their own teaching schools to make clergymen perfect, I have my own students (my wives). I will welcome a sixth wife after my fifth one dies and I will marry her under God wherever I want. Other Biblical men had multiple wives so what is wrong with me having more than one? God never said that I could not marry another wife after one died, and he never said I had to remain a virgin.

I use sex to get what I want and I like that I can find power in that. Three of my wives have been good and the other two have been bad. I find that the older they are, the more they are willing to be controlled in the way that I want them to be. I like them to be submissive as well as rich. I remember the way that I would control the conversation and accuse them of cheating or drunkenness to make them feel bad. When I did, they always gave me what I wanted, which was mostly money.
